General Information

Name of Product/Version:

---

CourseLeaf SYL

Product Description:

---

This is a cross browser web application used to manage course Syllabi for postsecondary institutions.

Date Completed:

---

August 2023

Contact information:

---

accessibility@courseleaf.com

Evaluation Methods Used:

---

Every attempt has been made to ensure that this application is accessible to as many people as possible and supports any combination of all major browser, operating system, and assistive technologies.

Internal testing is completed twice a year using our default template with generic content. In addition, new elements are developed with accessibility in mind and are tested (internally and by clients) before being added to our core software. Finally, any feedback from our clients regarding accessibility is evaluated and added to our cores software so it can benefit the entire higher education community.

We are also extremely lucky to have a very active accessibility community with our clients and take every opportunity to integrate any suggestions into our core software to benefit the entire community.

General Notes:

This document is scoped to include only course syllabi web pages. Content is primarily static text and tables. Beyond a computer (Windows, Mac, iPhone, Android), a modern browser (the last three released versions of Edge, Chrome, Firefox, or Safari) and input device(s) equivalent to a mouse and keyboard, no additional hardware or software is required.

WCAG documentation requires a conformance level of “supports” where there are no relevant instances of the criteria within the application. When this happens, it will be noted in the “Remarks and Explanations” column as “Not applicable”.
